BULLETIN GIRLS STAND UP FOR HAWAII'S ATTRACTIONS

The Seattle Morning Times of Nov. 4 publishes the following very enterprising interview with the Bulletin girls:

SEATTLE NICE VILLAGE, BUT THERE ARE—

There Is No Real Reason Why This City Should Put on Airs as Long as Dear Honolulu is on the Map

MT. RAINIER IS GRAND,
BUT GO SEE TANTALUS

Nine Little Maids, All Continues, All From Hawaii, Fail to Find Anything So Very Tropical "Up Here."

This Seattle is a pretty nice little town all right enough, and we've seen some fairly high buildings, but there's really no reason why we should be around bragging about a twenty-story high chest expansion and weavable umbrella vest. Not any.

Take it from those nine bewitching girls from the Hawaiian Islands, the little old town of Honolulu is super-some, in any economy, and no more than well-like like. Hello says some too.

Don't think that this is said unkindly. It isn't. "We have had the most delightful times of our lives and the folks here are just lovely," and that from those same nine young ladies too.

"Mount Rainier? It's lovely. It's nothing as fine as Tantalus. Of course you can see Tantalus all the time, and here there are some—elephants, birds, the driver in the rubber boat, and so on. It can be as the other places it cleaned up for a moment, when we leave, there was nothing clean there." This from Miss Emma Rose.

Get out! It's awful. "Some one sent us a box of chocolates. What's that place? We thought it was, they were blue. We never try any alligator joints or anything. We're from Kapiolani Estate, and asked Miss Rose Abolan for help when we leave, there was nothing clean there." This from Miss Emma Rose.
